Richard Milburn School

An Alternative Program for Long-Term Suspended Students

Richard Milburn School (RMS) in partnership with Wake County Public Schools is committed to saving the school year for long-term suspended students from the Wake County Public School System, in grades 6-12, by creating an environment that fosters academic and behavioral success.

Our Beliefs:

- All students can learn.
- Small classes provide environments for optimal learning.
- Regular daily attendance is necessary for academic progress.
- The Transition to Work component of our program makes us unique and is designed to help student develop job skills and be successful.
- By offering the core courses from the Wake County Public School's curriculum, our student can gain appropriate academic credit and stay on grade level when they return to their base school.
- Individualized learning programs create more opportunity for the success of all students.

Curriculum

Richard Milburn School offers courses that mirrors course offerings of the Wake County Public School System in Science, Math, English/Language Arts, and Social Studies. RMS also embeds core subject content in the Transition to Work Program, which teaches pre-employment work skills, life skills, and skills necessary for success in the transition from high school to either work or college. RMS focuses on using non-traditional, flexible scheduling and student-based outcomes to adapt curriculum content, and instructional strategies. Individual counseling also provides additional information pertinent to student success. Student evaluation and assessment is a shared procedure between RMS and each student's base school.

Student Eligibility

To be eligible for enrollment in RMS, a student must be a Wake County resident serving a long-term suspension or appealing a long-term suspension from a Wake County public middle or high school.

Referral and Intake Process

Students are referred to RMS by the Wake County Public School System. The RMS staff assists students and parents through an intake and assessment process, which includes an interview, transcript evaluation, schedule development, completion of registration forms, and program orientation. Students enter RMS continuously throughout the year.
